

23 – 26 January, Double Tree Hilton, London

Press Release For Immediate Release

From: Anna Slater      Date: 26.10.2011

Discuss and debate the greatest challenges facing interconnection professionals

In a constantly evolving telecoms sector, interconnection remains an integral source of revenue for both mobile and fixed operators. But as operators continue along the path toward Next Generation Networks they must adapt their business models and ensure interoperability and QoS in response to changing market conditions and technologies.

The 18th annual edition of Interconnection World Forum will discuss and debate the greatest challenges facing interconnection professionals. Join us in January 2012 to debate on IPX as an interconnect strategy for operators; gain insight on the impact of net neutrality on interconnection on the internet; learn from operators on how they are responding to decreasing mobile termination rates and the prospect of a market with zero termination rates; debate how wholesale access including bitstream and LLU should be regulated and much more.
